

Political uncertainty shaking business confidence, says poll
 By Susan T. Amador

THE PHILIPPINE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
 (PCCC) says that business confidence in the Philippines is at its lowest level since the 1990s, according to a survey conducted last year.

The survey, which was conducted by the PCCC and the Asian Development Bank (ADB), found that only 15 percent of business leaders in the Philippines are optimistic about the future of the country's economy.

The survey also found that 65 percent of business leaders are pessimistic about the future of the country's economy, and 20 percent are uncertain.

The PCCC says that the main reason for the decline in business confidence is the political uncertainty in the Philippines, which has led to a lack of investment and a decline in business activity.

Respect separation of powers

Political Trends

By [Name] | 10/10/2011

The separation of powers is a fundamental principle of democratic governance. It ensures that no single branch of government becomes too powerful, thereby protecting the rights of citizens and maintaining the balance of power. In many countries, the executive, legislative, and judicial branches are clearly defined and operate independently. However, in some nations, there is a tendency for the executive branch to overstep its bounds, encroaching on the powers of the other branches. This can lead to authoritarianism and the erosion of democratic institutions. It is crucial for citizens and leaders alike to uphold the separation of powers and ensure that each branch performs its duties within the confines of the law.

The separation of powers is not just a theoretical concept; it is a practical necessity for a functioning democracy. When the branches of government are clearly defined and operate independently, it allows for a more efficient and accountable system of governance. Citizens can hold each branch accountable for its actions, knowing that there are checks and balances in place. This system also helps to prevent the concentration of power in a single individual or group, which is a common feature of authoritarian regimes. By respecting the separation of powers, we can ensure that our government remains a true servant of the people.

Secret society

Young In Don

The concept of a secret society has long fascinated the human imagination. From the Freemasons to the Illuminati, these groups have often been portrayed as powerful and mysterious. However, the reality of secret societies is often quite different from the myths. Many secret societies are simply clubs or organizations with specific interests or goals. Some are focused on social or political issues, while others are more esoteric. The idea of a secret society with hidden powers and agendas is largely a product of fiction. While the existence of secret societies is a fact, their influence on the world is often exaggerated. It is important to approach the topic with a critical eye and not fall prey to the myths and legends that surround them.

China's struggling public intellectuals

Commentary

Public intellectuals in China face a unique set of challenges. They are often caught between the demands of the state and the expectations of the public. On the one hand, they are expected to provide critical commentary on government policies and actions. On the other hand, they must also be mindful of the state's sensitivity to dissent. This delicate balancing act can make it difficult for public intellectuals to voice their opinions freely. Despite these challenges, many public intellectuals in China continue to work for the betterment of their society. They use their platforms to raise important issues, educate the public, and advocate for reform. Their work is essential for the development of a more open and democratic China.

The role of public intellectuals in China is a complex one. They are often seen as the conscience of the nation, responsible for speaking truth to power. However, they also face significant pressure from the state to conform to its agenda. This tension is a defining feature of their work. Despite the challenges, public intellectuals in China have managed to make a significant impact on the public discourse. They have raised important issues that have led to policy changes and reforms. Their work is a testament to the power of the written word and the importance of intellectual freedom in a society striving for progress.

More disasters

Sense and Sensibility

By [Name] | 10/10/2011

The world is filled with disasters, both natural and man-made. From earthquakes and hurricanes to wars and pandemics, disasters are a constant presence in our lives. While we often feel helpless in the face of such events, there is much we can do to reduce the impact of disasters. One of the most important steps is to prepare ourselves and our communities. This includes having emergency plans in place, knowing evacuation routes, and having supplies on hand. Another key step is to build resilient infrastructure that can withstand natural disasters. By taking these steps, we can significantly reduce the human and economic toll of disasters. It is our responsibility as a global community to work together to prevent and mitigate disasters.

Disasters are a reminder of the fragility of human civilization. They show us that no matter how advanced our technology or how powerful our nations, we are still vulnerable to the forces of nature. This vulnerability should not lead to despair, however. It should lead to a renewed sense of purpose and a commitment to building a more resilient world. We must learn from the mistakes of the past and work to prevent future disasters. This requires a global effort, with all nations working together to address the challenges we face. Only through cooperation and a shared commitment to the well-being of all people can we hope to reduce the frequency and impact of disasters.

Land disputes delay claims of farmers

MANILA, Sept. 16 (AP)—Land disputes are delaying the claims of farmers in the Philippines, particularly in the context of the ongoing agrarian reform program. The Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) has reported that numerous cases of land ownership disputes are being resolved through the courts, which is slowing down the process of redistributing land to the farmers. This has caused frustration among the farming community, who are seeking faster resolution of their claims.
